IRISH IMMIGRANTS' TROUBLES.

Cardinal Logue, Upon an Ellis Island Agent's Complaints, Calls a Council to Effect Relief.

Patrick McCool, agent on Ellis Island for the Irish Immigrant Girls' Home, returned from Ireland yesterday, arriving on the Cunard Line steamship Lucania. While in Ireland he was received by Cardinal Logue, to whom he explained the trouble experienced by poor Irish immigrants in entering this port.

As a result of his visit, he said, a council of Bishops was called at Maynooth and the question discussed. The council decided to co-operate with Father Henry, the head of the Mission of Our Lady of the Rosary, who cares for the arrivals from Ireland. The Bishops will instruct the priests to inform their parishioners of the law and conditions in this country.

DIVED OVERBOARD TO SAVE DOG

Life Saver Followed Passenger Who Plunged from the General Slocum After a Lady's Pet.

The steamboat General Slocum left the West Twenty-second Street pier at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. On the second deck on the port side just aft the paddle box was Harrison Armstrong, a Summer resident of Bensonhurst. With him was a woman who was holding in her lap a beautiful little spaniel. The usual Saturday excursion crowd was on board. About half way to the Battery the dog became startled and jumped from his mistress's arms overboard. Armstrong instantly jumped after it. His white clothes, seen in the water caused a cry of "Woman overboard!" to be raised. Arthur Nelson, professional life saver on the vessel, threw overboard a life belt, and followed it himself.

The steamboat was going at full speed, and the men and dog were soon left nearly a mile astern. New York Central Tug 17, with a loaded car float, was the first to reach them. Ropes were thrown, but the wash of the ungainly vessel nearly drowned the men, and it looked as if they might be crushed between the tug and float. The Slocum had promptly dropped a lifeboat, and this took the men and the dog aboard. The dog had made trouble for Armstrong by climbing constantly on his shoulders, it being sometimes entirely out of water.

When they reached the steamboat there was lusty cheering from the passengers, and great excitement generally.

"What did you do it for?" asked a passenger.

"Well, you see," replied Armstrong in drawling accents, "I thought the steamboat might not be willing to stop for a dog, but I knew they would for me."

Armstrong landed at the Battery and went to the Eastern Hotel to get some dry clothes, which he sent for. His companion disappeared in the height of the excitement with the dog, and probably went ashore at the same time.

GEN. URIBE URIBE MISSING.

Believed to be in Costa Rica Organizing an Expedition Against the Colombian Government.

Gen. Rafael Uribe Uribe, the well-known Colombian insurgent General and exile, who has been in this city for several months, and who three months ago issued a manifesto to the Colombian insurgents in the field, asking them to lay down their arms, but who was unheeded, has left New York secretly, and it is feared by the Colombian Consul General here that he is now in Costa Rica organizing an insurgent expedition for a descent upon his country.

Gen. Uribe Uribe when he issued his manifesto let it be understood that he favored at least a temporary cessation of hostilities, on the ground that the insurgents did not have the sinews of war sufficient to keep up the struggle. His fellow-insurgents in the field, it was understood, suspected the authenticity of the manifesto and kept on fighting. It is now believed in some quarters that the wily old insurgent did not mean the manifesto to be accepted and that it was a ruse of some sort.

After it was rejected he continued to reside here quietly in the Hoffman Arms, at Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. Two months ago his Adjutant, Col. Pablo E. Obrejon, left the city suddenly, saying that he was going to Costa Rica on a private mission. Six weeks ago, or soon after the departure of the Adjutant, Gen. Uribe Uribe had it given out that he had fallen from a street car and injured his knee, and would be confined to his room for at least six weeks. This information, it is said, caused the agents of the Colombian Consul to relax their vigilance over his movements to a certain extent.

Four weeks ago the General suddenly paid his bill at the Hoffman Arms and gave out that he was going to Long Branch to recuperate. He had his baggage shipped to Long Branch, but it was learned a few weeks later that he had only stopped in that resort for one day, and then had disappeared.

Sibyl Sanderson May Sing Here.

There is a rumor, originating from good authority, that Manager Maurice Grau of the Metropolitan Opera Company has engaged Sibyl Sanderson, the American prima donna, to appear in New York next season. Miss Sanderson has not been here for a long time, but has been singing at all the leading European capitals since her last appearance in America. Mr. Grau has engaged for next season many women singers, despite the announcement made last Spring that in the future the company would have fewer members. Those already engaged by Mr. Grau are Mmes. Sembrich, Eames, Ternini, Gadski, and Breval, Mlle. Calvé, and Suzanne Adams.

Man Injured by Exploding Siphon.

Henry R. Martin of 252 West Thirty-eighth Street, a night driver for Park & Tilford's store at Seventy-second Street and Columbus Avenue, had his right arm badly cut last night by the explosion of a siphon filled with seltzer having a pressure of 250 pounds. He was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where it was found that one of the arteries of his arm had been severed.

The New York Times
Published: July 21, 1901
Copyright © The New York Times